

Figure 49A-2. Sketch profile of solution channels and sinkhole development in carbonate bedrock. The movement of surface water and groundwater is a key factor in the development of a karst landscape as well as in the shifting of residual soils that generates sinkholes.